Introduction to Performance-Based Budgeting Concepts

Achieving program success hinges on strategic planning from leadership and effective execution from frontline staff. As a program manager, it's imperative to accurately estimate and secure resources necessary for achieving desired outcomes. This entails understanding program intricacies and justifying budget requests to stakeholders. Imagine seamlessly linking resource needs to performance outcomes through a performance-based budget, showcasing how specific goals can be realized with allocated resources.

Course Objectives

- Budget and Performance Foundations: Review the foundations of budgets and the budgeting process to see the opportunities for linking formulation with performance planning.
- Performance-Based Budget Basics: Discover how a strategic plan can drive a program's budget process and how a logic model can illuminate the connection between budget and performance.
- Overcoming Common PBB Issues: Identify common policy, process, and people issues that may impact introduction of performance-based budgeting and learn how to mitigate them.
- Link Budget with Performance for Program Success: Programs may often fail where budgeted resources aren't sufficient to achieve strategy aims. Learn to alleviate this problem by integrating the budget and performance planning processes.
